

Roosevelt Center Will Groove To Jazz Festival Saturday

by Peter Reppert

The Greenbelt Jazz Festival will be held on Saturday, October 14 starting at 1 p.m. at the Roosevelt Center and from 8 to 11:30 p.m., in the New Deal Café. Five different groups, ranging in style, will perform.

Big Band Tradition starts with a big bang at 1 p.m. This full-sized, seasoned jazz orchestra plays songs of the big band era by the likes of Glenn Miller, Duke Ellington, Harry James, Count Basie and Bennie Goodman as well as postwar groups like Stan Kenton, Woody Herman, Sammy Nestico and Brian Setzer, with an emphasis on the full gamut of ballroom dance rhythms. Next up is the Not Too Cool Trio featuring Mike Grasso on trumpet. Their tasteful straight-ahead sound has accompanied brunch at the New Deal Café for several years (check them out every second and fourth Sunday). Finishing the outdoor proceedings and starting roughly at 5 p.m. is Brilliant Corners, whose name comes from both a Thelonius Monk song title and the fact that they are one of the house bands at the Corner Lounge in Davidsonville. Leader Bill Freed, drummer Wyman Lester and bassist Kwame Mfume have also appeared at the New Deal Café. Lester and Mfume play with Pete Reppert for jazz brunch weeks alternating with Not Too Cool. Brilliant Corners likes to blend modern jazz standards with funk and even go-go and will invite selected soloists in the spirit of the jam sessions they frequently host.

Moving indoors, pianist John Guernsey will play standards at 6:30 p.m. Funkis Omnibus plays from 8 to 9 p.m., with Alex Bizaro, CC Wilson, Greg Meyer and Bam playing all kinds of contemporary music, although they like to explore the funky side of jazz. A mixture of smooth jazz, East Bay funk, Weather Report and some very cool originals, will get the feet moving. Funkis Omnibus is a sophisticated

Proposed Expansions of I-495, BW Parkway Could Affect City

by Carolina Velloso

Governor Larry Hogan's proposal to expand I-270, the Capital Beltway (I-495) and the Baltimore-Washington Parkway (MD-295) could have a significant impact on the residents of Greenbelt, officials say.

The $9 billion project, announced in a press release by Hogan's office on September 21, would add four express toll lanes, two in each direction, to I-270 and I-495. The expansion would cover the entire Maryland portion of I-495 from the American Legion Memorial Bridge to the Woodrow Wilson Memorial Bridge. The new lanes would be built and administered by a private contractor in what would be the largest public-private highway partnership in North America, the press release said.

Four lanes would also be added to MD-295, the control of which would first be transferred to the Maryland Transportation Authority (MDTA) from the U.S. Department of the Interior. The new and existing lanes would then be built and administered by the MDTA. Hogan has already begun the transfer negotiations with Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, the press release said.

Greenbelt officials were surprised by Hogan's announcement and are still gathering more specific details about the project and its potential impact on Greenbelt.

"We were caught off guard," Mayor Emmett Jordan said. "We were very shocked and concerned about the proposal."

The proposed expansion to MD-295 is especially problematic to the council members. It would likely require the removal of some of the Parkway's natural landscape and possibly encroach into Greenbelt, they said.

"The Parkway cuts right through our city," Jordan said. "I'm not sure how (Hogan) could add more lanes without taking down more trees or expanding into Greenbelt somehow."

Hogan's office touted the congestion relief that the 12 new lanes would bring to the Baltimore-Washington area. According to the press release, the area is the most congested in the nation, and Maryland has the second-longest commute times nationally.

Critics of the project, however, believe that it will do little to ease traffic in the long term. The expanded highways would eventually become congested again and the larger number of cars using them would increase traffic on smaller roads, said Stewart Schultz, executive director of the Coalition for Smarter Growth, in a press release.

A 2012 study by the Federal Highway Administration, the National Park Service (NPS) and the Maryland State Highway Administration on the feasibility of expanding MD-295 concluded that a wider Parkway would not

Answers to Questions

The News Review once again asked candidates for election to the Greenbelt City Council to respond to questions posed by this newspaper. Answers are limited to 300 words. If an answer exceeds the limit, the answer is cut off at that point. Here are the answers to our first question.

Question 1. What would you like council to accomplish in the next term?

Colin Byrd: I only get 300 words, so let's just talk about five of my goals:

First, I will work tirelessly to better protect Old Greenbelt from shady developers. As a lifelong Greenbelter, I have been deeply concerned about recent and current attempts to destroy Old Greenbelt's historic character. It took too long for council to take a stand on the Lakeside North development issue. There was a lack of transparency. And, with the ongoing zoning rewrite, I will stand up to developers and county officials who look at Old Greenbelt and only see dollar signs instead of seeing a beautiful planned community with time-honored treasures like GHI and the Roosevelt Center.

Second, I will work for increased public safety and less biased policing. There are too many thefts, robberies, stabbings and shootings in Greenbelt. Many police officers have expressed a crisis of confidence in city leadership. Many police officers are leaving. There is no permanent police chief. And many law abiding residents of color feel that the racial profiling has to end. So, for Greenbelt, policing is complex, but I am committed to fixing it. That is why my campaign enjoys the support of two county prosecutors, former state's attorney Glenn Ivey and current state's attorney Angela Alsobrooks.

Third, I will support more progressive environmental protections. Donald Trump and Scott Pruitt have declared war on the environment. Greenbelt cannot surrender.

Fourth, I will promote more geographic unity. Greenbelt is too divided by region. Whether you live in Greenbelt East, Old Greenbelt, Franklin Park, or Greenbelt Station, you are first a Greenbelter. This city council cannot keep ignoring Greenbelt East and Greenbelt West. Living in the "outer parts" of Greenbelt does not mean you should be

Letters to the Editor

When Silence Is Not Golden

The Greenbelt City Council unanimously agreed to send a letter to the county council at its September 11, 2017, meeting regarding the county’s zoning rewrite project. Three weeks later the city council has not yet taken its promised action. Time is of the essence. The city council had been asked to take action before the final Comprehensive Review draft of the new zoning ordinance was released. This did not happen and the Comprehensive Review draft was released.

The Residential Planned Community (RPC) zone which has protected density in Old Greenbelt for decades has been eliminated. A draft Greenbelt Neighborhood Conservation Overlay Zone (NCOZ), a custom-designed zone for the area previously covered by the RPC zone, has been put on the shelf. Without action by our elected leaders, the new underlying zones in Old Greenbelt will allow for more density, height and mass than what is currently found. For example, the residential townhouse zone, which currently caps density at six dwelling units per acre, is slated to be replaced by a Single Family Attached Zone under the new zoning ordinance which will allow for 16.33 dwelling units per acre.

We ask the city council to take its promised action before it is too late and the character of Old Greenbelt is irrevocably changed. There are places in the county where higher density, height and mass may be appropriate or desired. Old Greenbelt is not one of them. We are a unique historic community, which is world renowned. A Greenbelt NCOZ would protect and preserve the unique development features and character of Old Greenbelt while allowing GHI and other property owners more flexibility with respect to certain requirements in the underlying zones.

Solar Homes Shine Saturday, October 7

Drive, walk or cycle through Greenbelt and notice numerous homes with roofs full of solar panels. Maybe one is just curious to know more about them. Maybe one is seriously interested in having them installed on a house but are confused by the various purchasing options. Buy? Lease? Or maybe go with the little or no down payment option and pay a fixed price per kilowatt-hour to the installer for the amount of electricity the solar panels produce each month. To learn more, mark the calendar for the weekend of October 7 to 8 when solar homeowners across the Washington, D.C., region and the nation will be opening up homes to show their systems and answer questions.

Greenbelt will be represented by six homes, the largest concentration in the area. And not just solar energy will be highlighted. Half the Greenbelt homes will showcase plug-in hybrid and all-battery electric cars and home charging systems. Plus, a myriad of energy-conserving and water-conserving products will be a part of this green building tour. All six Greenbelt homes will be open on Saturday, October 7 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Visit the Tour of Solar and Green Homes website for details: solartour.org/homes.html

An electronic tour guide can be downloaded for free or a printed copy may be purchased for a modest fee.

This Week at the Theater

Victoria and Abdul comes to Old Greenbelt Theatre on Friday, October 6. Directed by Stephen Frears, it stars the incomparable Judi Dench, now 82, as Queen Victoria, and Ali Fazal as Indian Muslim clerk Abdul Karim, who is sent to help celebrate Victoria’s Golden Jubilee in 1887. Quite unexpectedly, Victoria finds Abdul enchanting; their connection blossoms into a joyous late-life platonic bonding.

Those not amused by this odd couple’s flourishing include Victoria’s son Bertie (Eddie Izzard), Prime Minister Lord Salisbury (Michael Gambon) and Baroness Churchill (Olivia Williams).

Co-op Month in Greenbelt

by Leta Mach

This is the second in a series of articles for Co-op Month.

The principles of education, training and information are crucial to the continued success of cooperative businesses. Greenbelt co-ops provide this in many ways with a highlight being participation in the Greenbelt Cooperative Alliance to explain cooperative business practices to both co-op members and non-members. Greenbelt's cooperatives have also been interviewed by Greenbelt Access Television and these interviews can be seen on GATE during Co-op Month. In addition to fulfilling its purpose of disseminating information, the Greenbelt News Review also works with college interns to further their education. The Co-op Supermarket and Pharmacy holds sampling of products and offers consumer information for shoppers including factsheets and recipes. Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) sends email and printed newsletters and holds town hall meetings on relevant topics. The Greenbelt Federal Credit Union has financial counseling and education for members through GreenPath Financial Wellness and in its quarterly newsletters. Greenbelt Makerspace Cooperative holds regular repair cafés to help people learn how to repair equipment. And, the purpose of Greenbelt Nursery School is to provide an enriching educational environment for young children and their parents.

Economic Participation

Members of a cooperative build a better world economically by working together. Members of the Greenbelt Federal Credit Union receive low loan rates, dividends and bonus dividends. As not-for-profit organizations, credit unions generally offer better rates than for-profit banks. Members of GHI can find affordable homes. Co-op Supermarket and Pharmacy members receive an annual patronage dividend based on the financial performance of the store. Likewise, members of the Greenbelt News Review may receive a dividend that depends upon the financial success of the paper.

Democratic Control

The principle that cooperatives maintain their autonomy and independence is closely linked to the principle of democratic control. Cooperatives are autonomous, self-help organizations controlled by their members. As such, they hold annual meetings and elect a board of directors to set policy. The Greenbelt News Review and the Co-op Supermarket and Pharmacy hold annual meetings in the fall and they both have seven board members. The Greenbelt Federal Credit Union, GHI and the Greenbelt Nursery School hold their annual meetings in the spring. The credit union has seven board members plus three credit committee members who are elected. GHI members elect nine board members, three audit committee members and five nominations and elections committee members. The nursery school board is comprised of seven committee chairpersons, four elected executive members and the schools' director and administrator. Members of Greenbelt Makerspace Cooperative attend meetings, vote on policies and procedures, and decide which programs to offer. Many co-ops, such as GHI, the Greenbelt Nursery School, the Greenbelt Federal Credit Union and the Co-op Supermarket and Pharmacy, hire managers to run the day-to-day business of the co-op.

Our Empty Bowls Will Fill You Up

Animals to be Blessed Sunday

Mowatt United Methodist Church and the Greenbelt Community Church will hold their annual joint Blessing of the Animals service on the Mowatt Church lawn Sunday, October 8 promptly at 4:30 p.m. Pastors Fay Lundin and Glenyce Grindstaff will officiate. In case of rain or inclement weather, the ceremony will be held in the upstairs Fellowship Hall. Use the front entrance.

St. Francis of Assisi was a renowned animal lover of the 13th century, but it is thought that the animal blessing tradition dates back to the fourth century with St. Anthony of the Desert.

Animals must be safely and comfortably transported back and forth to the events and owners should have water and food on hand if needed. Make sure animals are properly restrained (leashes for dogs and carrying cages for cats or other small animals). Cats and dogs must wear a collar with current ID.

Do not bring pets that are not people- or animal-friendly or animals that will be frightened. Children are welcome to bring teddy bears or other toy animals. If a pet is unable to attend, bring a photo instead.

Donations for the Greenbelt Community Animal Response Team (GCART) will be accepted. GCART will have an information table at the blessing.

As people of faith and conscience, we must push back against hatred, bigotry and white nationalism as part of a long-term sustained movement-- not an every now and again thing. Where can we find strength for ongoing resistance? And how can we remain resilient in the face of such repeated and systemic injustice?

And, fifth, I will work to expand Metro access and parking at Greenbelt Station.

Judith F. Davis

Many issues lie ahead for the new council. Overarching everything will be the outcome of the County Zoning Re-Write process. Council needs to resolve the NCOZ issue to protect Historic Greenbelt’s unique character. Next in importance is obtaining the $2.5 million loan necessary to complete the repairs to the Greenbelt Lake dam mandated by the State. Council also needs to push WMATA to agree to the plans that the City can afford for the bike/pedestrian path connecting the South Core to Metro.

Economic development that is appropriate and beneficial to Greenbelt must also be discussed and strategies produced. Commercial office vacancies are at 29%. Acreage around the Metro Station provides opportunities for positive mixed-use development. The City needs a staff person who will focus on this issue.

An assessment of City facilities and other elements of our aging infrastructure must be completed along with a plan and costs for renovation/replacement. Included is the HVAC system and roof of the Greenbelt Theatre and possible installation of solar panels in suitable locations.

The City must work with the State Highway Administration to improve conditions on Greenbelt Road, including lighting, bike lanes, and timing of traffic lights. Renovation of the Buddy Attick Park parking lot that includes many “green” features needs to be completed.

Many studies and surveys have been conducted in past years or will soon be completed. The Council, staff and our citizens need to work closely together to budget improvements suggested in the Forest Preserve Health Assessment, the Senior Mobility and Accessibility Study, the PSAC security camera report, the Recreation Master Plan Study, and others.

There are many urgent issues facing the next City Council. I have the experience, knowledge and open-mindedness necessary to find the best solutions for Greenbelt and the diverse needs of our citizenry.

Leta Mach

My goals are to build Greenbelt’s future by working together and respecting the rich heritage and lessons of Greenbelt’s past. I would like to see Council accomplish many things including --

- Foster economic development and support local businesses with a focus on ways the cooperative model can be used and expanded.
- Support the Friends of the Greenbelt Theater in the operation of the theater and undertake phase II of the renovation.
- Complete gateway signage as a welcome to Greenbelt for visitors and residents alike.
- Repair the Greenbelt Lake dam and make the lake parking lot environmentally friendly.
- Continue to ensure public safety through community policing and partnerships.
- Look for ways to meet the needs of citizens and explore whether rooms in the historic Middle School can help.

- Implement more of the sustainability and pedestrian and bicycle master plans and in particular turn Cherrywood Lane into a complete, green street.
- Advocate for and work to see that all Greenbelt children can attend Greenbelt schools.

However, I feel it is even more important to undertake these activities in a spirit of respect and cooperation. The council and citizens must work together to see that the unfortunate, reprehensible tone of discourse that exists in many areas does not infect Greenbelt. I feel council members, city staff, and Greenbelt citizens must work together to address issues. Because new issues and concerns often arise, people must be willing to research, ask questions, listen, and work with others before making decisions and casting aspersions on others. In short, what I would most like Council to accomplish in the next term is a working and respectful relationship.

Susan Stewart

Rather than submit a laundry list of issues, my most important goal remains the same: To change the culture of council from a hands-off, reactionary government, into one that empowers the community to get things done.

For too long I’ve watched citizen-led initiatives and concerns fall by the way-side for lack of support or interest by council. Only when anger and frustration hits critical mass will council sometimes act. Some of these ideas seem like mere dreams now, for how long we’ve waited for them. That wait needs to end.

The list is long: adding more public gardens & public art, helping newly-immigrated residents, adding solar power, renovating a recreation center, making a city-uniting walking path, protecting and adding acreage to the forest preserve, and so forth. The backlog from indecision leaves council with no time for innovation. Plans shelved indefinitely are denied a schedule and budget. As a result we fall further behind.

I’m proud our Greenbelt’s history as a leader, showing the way by example. Our city faces unique challenges, but it has an opportunity for unique changes too. When issues are complicated and not the routine, leadership cannot continue to make excuses or bury their heads in the sand. During our country’s most desperate times, Greenbelt was founded as a city with a vision, bucking the trend, to create a new ideal. Why do we hesitate to do so again? As we approach our 80th anniversary as a city, what is our vision for the next 80 years? We should not falter when watching current events nationwide, or shed our values for fear of political consequences. Let’s not sit back on our laurels or use cookie-cutter solutions. This beautiful vision of Greenbelt must not be relegated to history.

Edward Putens

The truth be told there are more projects or “unfinished” business, than can be listed here in answering this question. I decided to choose four that I feel are realistic and doable.

Repairs to the Greenbelt Lake Dam are a high priority. The city is under a consent order with the Maryland Department of the Environment (MDE). We have no choice but to make these necessary repairs at a cost estimate of $1.9 million. We were originally going to phase these repairs over a period of time, which would drain our reserves and postpone other capital projects such as roads, building repairs, park improvements, etc. Voter approval is required to borrow the funds from MDE’s Water Quality State Revolving Loan Program at a very low interest rate.

Second, complete the path to Greenbelt Metro for our new residents at Greenbelt Station. It’s been a long-awaited and promised amenity for these residents.

Also related to Greenbelt Station is an error in the school boundaries that keeps their elementary and high school students from attending neighborhood schools in Greenbelt. The county agreed to this back in 2004, but apparently someone forgot to include our new residents.

Fourth is a need for another dog park somewhere in the city beside the current one on Hano-ver Parkway. The owners of Franklin Park have twice offered to work with the City on a pos-sible joint public-private partner-ship to build one in Franklin Park. This could be a unique opportunity and a first for the City, while we consider further alternatives for one somewhere in the center of town.

Bill Orleans

Council should preen less and pontificate less. Council’s first responsibility is to vote on the questions before them and be willing to be accountable for their vote. City business should be conducted concisely and re-solved. Council’s self-aggrandiz-ing should end. Pomposity and hypocrisy should end. Vanity and pretense should end. Ceremony should be secondary to substan-tive conversation on issues of interest to Greenbelt and its resi-dents. Council should welcome more participation from resi-dents, in attendance and speaking at meetings. Greenbelters own council, not those elected to it.

None of us can know what will happen tomorrow. Things we may have thought off the table could return; those we may have thought inconceivable could bear upon us; things we may have believed about ourselves could prove too costly to our profit.

I might like council just to be good in the next term. That would be a change. I might like more: council should be more open-minded, more good-hearted, and clearly more transparent: obfuscate less; equivocate less; dissemble less.

That would be some accom-plishment!

Emmett V. Jordan

I will continue to advocate for many of the priorities I have pursued on Council over the past 8 years.

I am committed to protecting the City’s unique legacy while focusing on a vibrant future for Greenbelt. The County zoning or-dinance rewrite will be completed and the character of “Historic Greenbelt” will be protected with a “neighborhood conservation overlay zone” designation.

At the same time, Greenbelt needs to undertake our own eco-nomic development activities in order to thrive. Attracting desir-able business activities and en-couraging commercial redevelop-ment that aligns with our values will reduce Greenbelt’s reliance on residential taxes. I expect to have an employee focusing on these activities in the near future.

Related to infrastructure and sustainability, installing solar panels on several City buildings and adding electric vehicles to our fleet will reduce our carbon footprint. I would also expect the Buddy Attick Lake Dam repairs to be nearly complete in 2019, if the funding referendum passes. I would like to see a “path for-ward” for renovations to the auditorium and HVAC system in our movie theater.

An on-going priority of mine is improving access to City in-formation for the public. I expect to have the capacity to record or broadcast all Council work sessions by the end of the com-ing term. We have the resources available in the budget to make upgrades to the City’s document management system and website.

Council must direct and sup-port the City Manager in order to insure her continuing success. A permanent Police Chief, Director of Planning & Community De-velopment, and several other key positions will be selected/filled during the next term. Finally, I will work to welcome and engage Greenbelt Station residents into our community and continue to focus on enhancing the connec-tions and a sense of community between all sections of Greenbelt.

Silke Pope

It is time for the city to hire a part time smart growth eco-nomic development advisor to help guide the city and refine its vision for the Greenbelt of the future. I feel it is important to be proactive in shaping the future of our city by cultivating partner-ships that sustain growth. With the rapid expansion of STEM programs in the region along with our proximity to the Univer-sity of Maryland, Goddard, Johns Hopkins and Washington DC, an economic advisor proficient in the field will be a major asset to the city. I would also like to cre-ate and implement an economic growth and development advi-sory board to the council, whose prime focus will be to look at ways we as a city can expand and diversify our tax base, enact solutions that connect current and prospective businesses, encour-age entrepreneurship and support workers while protecting and maintaining our city’s quality of life.

Second, I feel it is imperative to find a solution that ensures the WMATA trail extension is inte-grated into the city in a fiscally responsible fashion. There needs to be a concentrated focus on this issue to get it resolved quick-ly. The WMATA trail extension helps improve connectivity within our city. It is vital to support this direct connection to the Metro which allows residents to access mass transport supporting our ongoing vision for a cleaner and more energy efficient Greenbelt.

Last, I firmly believe the advancement of public safety and quality of life initiatives should continue to be a priority within the city. As part of this public safety initiative, I would advocate for increased community policing initiatives such as additional bike and foot patrols.

Aaron Marcavitch

First and foremost, I believe that the council must prepare for the changes that the zoning code will bring and to directly address the policies that guide economic development within the community. This, to my mind, will include making a push for reconstruction of MD Route 193. Additionally, I would ensure that our first responders have the re-sources they need to protect and serve Greenbelt. Finally, I would hope the council will work to bring resources to bear on city roads and their safety – especially the Southway/Ridge intersection.

Answers to our questions will not be published if they are received after the Monday at 8 p.m. deadline each week.

High Blood Pressure Initiative Launched by GAIL and AHA

The Greenbelt Assistance in Living (GAIL) program an-nounced a new partnership with the American Heart Association called “Check. Change. Control. Self-monitoring Blood Pressure Initiative.” Developed to support hypertension management among adults, the program engages par-ticipants and emphasizes three important aspects of managing hypertension: checking for high blood pressure and symptoms; changing lifestyle and seeking treatment; and controlling hyper-tension by taking preventative measures.

This free initiative is an evi-dence-based high blood pressure (HBP) management program that utilizes a tracker to empower patients to take ownership of their cardiovascular health. The target audience is residents and city staff.

The program incorporates the concepts of physical activity and weight reduction, along with remote monitoring, mentoring and tracking as key features to improve HBP management. The initiative encourages residents and staff to take weekly readings over three months, with monthly prize drawings for participants who take four blood pressure readings per month and submit their data via computer or tracker cards turned in to the GAIL program office.

Blood pressure cuffs will be made available in the following locations: Community Cen-ter, Aquatic & Fitness Center, Youth Center, Green Ridge House Apartments (for residents only) and the Springhill Lake Recre-ation Center.

Registration began Monday, October 2 and continues through Friday, October 13. The program begins on Monday, October 16 and continues through Monday, January 15, 2018.

For more information call Nima Shamsa, GAIL program intern, at 240-542-2033 or email nshamsa@greenbeltmd.gov.

Music of Greenbelt Pioneers Delights Local Audiences

by Stephanie Selzer

Local vocalists celebrated the 80th anniversary of the first Greenbelt residents with two sold-out concerts at the Community Center on September 30 and October 1. The celebration, Here to Stay: The Music of the Greenbelt Pioneers, showcased the music popular in Greenbelt from the fall of 1937 to the end of 1938.

Chris Cherry, performing arts coordinator for the city, exceed the event, which featured performances from singers Maeve Ballantine, Amanda Ferguson, Aidan Larkin, Abram Shaw, Benjamin Shaw, Izzy Springer, Liana Ventimiglia and Megan Winner. Stefan Brodd accompanied on the piano.

Performers sang popular hits including The Lady is a Tramp, They Can’t Take That Away From Me, and I Got Rhythm. The audience was also treated to film clips of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers dancing on roller skates in Shall We Dance and Eleanor Powell tap dancing in Rosalie.

In preparation for the concert, Cherry visited the New York Public Library for the Performing Arts in Lincoln Center to perform “a little musical archeology.” He searched the archives to find music from 1937 and 1938 that Greenbelt residents would have heard in radio, film and Broadway musicals.

Music played a vital role in the lives of early Greenbelt residents and they “played as hard as they worked,” said Cherry.

Concerts, school dances and listening to the radio were communal activities that brought the new community together.

With the rise of individual handheld devices and earbuds, listening to music has become a much more personal experience. For this reason, Cherry believes live music and concerts like Here to Stay play an important role in today’s community. “There is a greater need for people to have communal celebrations and to share music and to share good times,” he said. “People long for connection.”

Hopi Auerbach and Carrie Dike attended Saturday’s concert in outfits inspired by the 1930s. “I wanted to contribute to the mood,” Auerbach said. More importantly, she and Dike were excited to support Greenbelt’s performing arts community. “It’s all about community and that’s what we want,” said Dike. “That’s why people love Greenbelt ... because it’s designed for people to interact.”

Former B-ball Star Coordinates Programs at SHL Rec. Center

by Matthew Arbach

For over 17 years, Brian Butler has been an integral part of the Springhill Lake Recreation Center (SHLRC). Since June 2000, Butler has spent much of that time acting as recreation coordinator, a job he has shared with Frank Jones for the past seven years. Butler’s life has been at times turbulent and far-reaching, yet he is certain that he has ended up where he wants to be: a member of the Greenbelt community, mentoring and enriching the lives of the young people he works and lives alongside. “I’m not going anywhere,” he says. “I am a part of this community as it is a part of me.”

Prior to his life in Greenbelt, Butler’s earlier years were largely spent in professional basketball. A talented player with a bright future predicted, he was selected in October 1999 to be part of the Pacific Basketball League, centered in Portland, Ore. The plan was that he would be signed to the summer league team for a lucrative salary, with an 80 percent chance of eventually making it to the Portland Trailblazers. The plan was thwarted, however, by the third NBA lock-out of 1998-99, when the organization was shut down over collective bargaining and salary disputes. Butler was presented with the option of playing professionally overseas instead, in countries like China, Ireland and Morocco. He declined the offer due to what he saw then as a “shaky” future without any guarantees. With a new family to look after, he was “chasing stability and a stable environment.”

He grew up in Lakewood, N.J., but attended and played basketball at Delaware State University. After time spent living in Brooklyn after college, Butler and his family made their way to Greenbelt, as his wife’s family resided in Maryland. At first feeling uncertain and untethered in a community he didn’t know, it was his connection to SHLRC and a stint at the Alternative Learning Center that set the next chapter of his life.

At times regretful of missing out on a life in professional sports, with all its honors and rewards, he quickly chose to move “one way, straight forward” and not indulge in “a pity party.” An epiphany was his reimagining of the word “recreation” into “re-creation.” Always a spiritual person, he felt that he “was supposed to be here.” He embraced what he now saw as “a beautiful situation” and threw himself into mentoring, creating an extended family of the people of his community. A frequent greeting to

Butler is “Hey, Dad!”

Butler’s history in professional sports has been a boon to connecting with young people. Of the young men he has mentored, 25 have made their way into college and pro basketball and often come back to reconnect. Butler’s son is now moving into that realm as well. Butler even made his way into video gaming: his likeness is part of the Playstation 2 game Final Four, a fact that excites many upon first hearing.

The main focus of Butler and Jones at SHLRC is to develop programs quickly and often. The surrounding Franklin Park community is fluid and transient, often with a major shift occurring every four to six months. Butler and Jones often take existing programs and adapt them to this dynamic. Currently, some of their programs are Raider Basketball Clinic, led by Eleanor Roosevelt High School coach Brendan O’Connell; Drop-In Computer Lab, in partnership with Paradyme Management; and Eagle Vision Program, which promotes healthy living and eating.

On July 7, 2016, Butler’s daughter, Journey, died from a rare form of kidney cancer at the age of 13. On Saturday, September 30, the Butler family held an event at Braden Field to commemorate her and to support the non-profit organization, Journey to Happiness Movement (J2HM), created in September 2016 to raise funds to promote the study of her illness. It is called renal medullary carcinoma and affects many with a sickle-cell trait. The event included a 5K run through Buddy Attick Park.

Butler proudly asserts, “I love Greenbelt!” He feels the city embraced him at the hardest time of his life. It has been his experiences here that helped him “become a man.” What began as an alternative life plan at SHLRC through the act of mentoring, something that “was never my goal,” has now “become a beautiful thing.”

Silke Pope

Silke Pope is seeking re-election to Greenbelt City Council. Pope has lived in Greenbelt for 19 years and has been a resident of Franklin Park, and most recently Belle Point. Silke came to Greenbelt with her family from Germany in 1998 after her husband, Joseph, retired from the United States Army.

Raised in a small town, Pope brings to Greenbelt familiar small-town values. Her natural tendency is one of engagement and activity in the community, taking on numerous volunteer roles and accruing accomplishments in Greenbelt over the past 19 years.

When she is not attending council meetings and events, she is cooking, walking, taking her rescued Greenbelt Animal Shelter dogs, Chip and Bambi, to the dog park and spending time with her granddaughter.

Pope was a founding member of the Springhill Lake Neighborhood Improvement Team, which lead to her interest in public safety. Pope served on the city’s Public Safety Advisory Committee (PSAC) for nine years, six years as chair, until she was elected to City Council in 2009. During her tenure leading PSAC the city saw real improvements in safety, including the installation of security cameras at the Spellman Overpass, emergency call boxes on Metro Drive and in the Franklin Park area and window guards on rental buildings two stories and above.

Currently, Pope is the council liaison to both PSAC and the Senior Citizen Advisory Committee. She continues to support public safety and quality of life initiatives.

Even before proudly earning U.S. citizenship in 2006, Pope became involved in several community groups in Greenbelt. A member of St. Hugh of Grenoble Church since 2000, she has been involved in numerous fundraising efforts, her most notable being the annual Oktoberfest, where she is best known for her authentic German dishes. She has also served as president of the Belle Point Homeowners’ Association since 2006 and a member of the American Legion’s Post 136 Ladies Auxiliary, where she served as president for two years.

Pope has experience in the field of international business relations and banking, where her bilingual ability, attention to detail and organizational skills were critical. Pope is currently employed by the Prince George’s County Schools.

Pope has served on several state and national committees including the National League of Cities (NLC) Public Safety and Crime Prevention Steering Committee and the NLC, Small Cities Council which she chaired in 2016. She also served on the Maryland Municipal League Convention Planning Committee and earned a fellowship from the University of Maryland’s Academy for Excellence in Local Governance. This fellowship provided Pope with a more thorough understanding of how local municipalities function and a strong understanding of governmental policy and ethics.

Emmett V. Jordan

Emmett V. Jordan is serving in his fourth term as a member of the Greenbelt City Council and second term as mayor. A Greenbelt resident for 17 years, Emmett relocated to the area to work with the University of Maryland in 1998. Soon after, he moved to Greenbriar Condominiums, attracted by the convenient location and the many recreational amenities of Greenbelt. In 2009, he became the first and only African-American elected to serve on Council.

A native of Cincinnati, Ohio, Jordan studied liberal arts and music at Morehouse College and at the University of Cincinnati, where he earned a Bachelor of Science degree in Urban Administration. He completed additional graduate coursework in Public Administration at Seton Hall University. Emmett participated in the UMD Legacy Leadership Institute on Municipal Government in 2009 and completed an Academy for Excellence in Local Governance Fellowship in 2011. He attends workshops and conferences frequently to learn about new issues that affect Greenbelt.

Jordan has worked hard to develop productive relationships with leaders from surrounding municipalities, the county and our state and federal delegations. These external relationships provide a platform to advocate for the best interests of Greenbelt. For the past four years, he has served on the board of directors of the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments and the Maryland Municipal League. He is the current vice chair of the MML Legislative Committee and was president of the Prince George’s County Municipal Association in 2013.

Emmett’s career provides him with over 25 years of experience in project management: planning and implementation capacity building programs for nonprofits. Since 2005, he has worked as an independent contractor, providing professional services focused on marketing, communications, strategic planning and fund development. He has worked with a variety of nonprofit organizations, including the Smithsonian Institution, the University of Maryland at College Park, Plainfield Neighborhood Health Center and the United Negro College Fund.

Greenbelt City Council Hears Proposed Bus Route Changes

by Brooks DuBose

Greenbelt City Council heard about two options of proposed bus route changes that will affect the G12 and G14 buses at Roosevelt Center during their worksession with the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (WMATA) and Prince George’s County Department of Public Works and Transportation (DPWT). The September 27 meeting was their biannual work session to discuss proposed bus route changes and service performance and to hear feedback from community members.

WMATA representatives Al Himes and Ginger Archibald addressed the bus route proposals initially discussed at the council meeting on September 11, including changes to the G12 and G14 routes, which would stagger departures from the Greenbelt and New Carrollton Metro stations.

The new schedule increases the frequency of bus arrivals at all stops on those routes and reduces wait times to 15 to 30 minutes. However, this proposed change will eliminate the timed transfer between the G12 and G14 at the Crescent Road stops near Roosevelt Center.

The timed transfer is used by about an average of 48 riders per day, said Himes. However, the staggered schedule of the G12 and G14 buses could benefit 268 riders per day on average.

The changes are budget-neutral, Himes said.

Currently, the wait time between the G12 and G14 at Roosevelt Center is five minutes. The proposed changes will increase that wait time to 15 to 30 minutes.

These changes are expected to reduce congestion at the New Carrollton Metro Station, per a city memo.

Greenbelt resident Stephen Holland offered an alternate proposal. Holland recommended implementing the staggered schedule on the weekends but leaving the timed transfer schedule in place during weekdays. Holland’s recommendation will be considered by WMATA, Archibald said.

Proposed changes for the B30 Greenbelt-BWI Thurgood Marshall Express Line bus route were also discussed. If enacted, the B30 line would add a stop at the Arundel Mills Mall.

Two options were mentioned at the September 11 meeting.

Option One would simply add a stop to Arundel Mills Mall. This would decrease bus arrival times by about 10 minutes from 60 minutes to 70 minutes, said Archibald.

Option Two would reroute the B30’s path from Greenbelt Metro Station through Laurel, adding one or two stops on Route 1, before heading to the mall and BWI Airport. These changes would increase the interval between buses to roughly 90 minutes, Archibald said.

“This is a cost-neutral proposal,” regardless of which option is decided, Archibald said.

Councilmember Konrad Herling asked if WMATA expects good ridership from the proposed B30 change.

“We haven’t made any specific project on that. [Arundel Mills Mall] seemed like an area with activity plus opportunity to transfer to a lot of other buses,” said Himes.

Residents voiced their preference for Option One. “Ridership might increase substantially if it’s servicing the [Maryland Live] Casino,” said resident William Orleans.

The deadline for written testimony regarding these changes ended on Monday, October 2 at 9 a.m.

WMATA and the Maryland Department of Transportation deliberated on the feedback received on these proposals at a meeting on the afternoon of October 2 and will submit their recommendations to the WMATA board of directors committee meeting on November 2. The full board will officially vote on the proposals on November 16.

DPWT representative Anthony Foster offered an update on the performance of the Route 15X line of The Bus, which began as a pilot program in April 2017 and services Greenbelt and New Carrollton Metro stations and NASA Goddard.

Foster reported the program has been successful thus far and ridership has shown “continued growth.”

No changes are planned for the route at this time. However, Mayor Emmett Jordan urged Foster and DPWT to consider adding service to Lanham-Severn Road and Seabrook MARC stations.

Other topics covered in the meeting include extending service hours of the G12 and G14 routes past 9:30 p.m. on weekends, adding electronic bus departure signs to the Greenbelt Metro Station and increased marketing for bus routes to increase ridership.

likely improve traffic. While it would be able to accommodate more vehicles, congestion levels would remain roughly the same, the study said.

At its meeting on September 25, the Greenbelt City Council announced that it would oppose the proposal. Council discussed drafting a letter to Hogan, the Maryland congressional delegation and NPS officials, focusing on the more urgent issue of preventing transfer of MD-295 from federal to state control. Expansion of MD-295 could not begin if the transfer did not occur.

"The idea that (the Parkway) would transfer to (the MDTA) when it is federal property ... is totally unacceptable," Councilmember Judith Davis said. "It worries me that the federal government would even entertain this idea. This would just be another indication of money coming before the environment."

The Coalition for Smarter Growth, in a press release, said that enhancing mass transit would better address Maryland's congestion problems than expanding highways. Council also suggested that investment in public transit and bike lanes would improve congestion and bring additional environmental benefits by decreasing the number of cars on those roads.

An expansion of I-495 and MD-295 would also present additional challenges, such as noise, to Greenbelt residents, councilmembers said. Greenbelt, which is cut through by both thoroughfares, is in a position to be uniquely affected.

"For the residents in our neighborhoods adjacent to the Beltway, noise is really an issue," Jordan said, "so adding four more lanes seems that it will make it a lot worse."

Council indicated that a potential next step would be to partner with other coalitions to oppose the project.

Headliner 4 Tha Gruv, playing from 9 to 11:30 p.m., is a dance-friendly smooth jazz septet led by drummer Darrell Dunning. One of their signature songs is drummer Billy Cobham's Red Barron from the Charlie Brown/Peanuts animated cartoon. They are on par with other well-known local smooth jazz groups, by putting jazz stylings on familiar songs like Sarah Smile. They do it all for the groove.

This evening is sponsored by Beltway Plaza, Town Center Realty, Roosevelt Center Merchants Association, Greenbelt

Co-op Supermarket & Pharmacy, Old Greenbelt Theatre, Greenbelt Federal Credit Union, New Deal Café, Friends of New Deal Café Arts and the City of Greenbelt.

The festival is free and open to the public, Saturday, October 14, 1 to 11:30 p.m. In case of rain, the festival will be inside the cafe.

Bill Orleans

Bill Orleans is still a jerk; let incumbent council be as honest, if not as accurate, in assessing themselves; let residents of Greenbelt be as honest, if not as accurate, in assessing themselves.

Insufficiently humiliated from this exercise two years ago, Orleans is again, indeed a candidate for Greenbelt council. He is serious. He would very much like to be elected to council, where he would hope to help reclaim the practice of democracy in Greenbelt and also where he would hope to help to reclaim the practice of democracy on the transportation planning board (TPB). (If elected he would still challenge to a duel, in Roosevelt Center, any other elected member of council interested in being Greenbelt's designated member of the TPB; method of engagement of their choice.) There is some question as to the number of words in his 2011 bio, 1,300 plus or 1,400 plus, but there is no question that number exceeds the News Review's apparently adopted policy that bios this year not exceed 450. Those were good little stories and that bio was totally revelatory of the development of Orleans' character which simultaneously is serious and playful in pursuing his contribution to the commonweal.

He hasn't the inclination or the time to whack 600 or 700 words from it. Orleans has not been, is not now nor would he be a leader in pursuing the commonweal; his role is more that of laggard, yet directing our attention to both the nakedness of our emperors and to our own hypocrisies in our respective contributions in that pursuit. (Or maybe we just say that we care about this or that or maybe we just don't care at all.)

His 2011 biography, mostly, if metaphorically accurate can be found in some version or another at BillOrleans.com or new and improved at greenbeltmd.gov.

ERHS Girls Volleyball Team Undefeated

The Eleanor Roosevelt girls volleyball team improved to 6-0 on Monday evening with a 3-0 victory over High Point High School. The talented team has yet to be challenged this season (they've won all six best-of-five matches in straight sets), but they will be tested on Thursday, October 12 when they host Bowie at 6:30 p.m. The team has nine matches plus a tournament in October, including a number of solid opponents in addition to Bowie. It should be an entertaining month.

Recycling Guidelines Change: Clamshells Now Acceptable

by Maryam El-Amin

The city's recycling guidelines have changed. As of August, plastic clamshell containers with resin code numbers 1 to 5 are now recyclable. Clamshells are box-shaped containers with a lid that such items as strawberries, blueberries or takeout food come in. Only those marked on the bottom with a number 1 to 5 inside the triangular chasing arrows are acceptable; any clamshell containers with a 6 (meaning it contains polystyrene or PS) can't be recycled.

Many residents visited the interactive display table at the Public Works booth during the Labor Day Festival. Sustainability Coordinator Luisa Robles and several volunteers helped educate visitors on what can be recycled in the city bins (Yes! material), what must be trash (No! material) and other materials that must be taken to special locations to be recycled.

Yes! materials can be put in single-stream recycling bins or taken to the recycling centers next to Buddy Attick Park or at the end of Hanover Parkway by the dog park. Wipe or rinse containers before recycling them.

No! materials include styrofoam cups, block Styrofoam, foam packing peanuts, wide-necked cups, small tubs or clam shell containers with a 6 (PS) symbol on the bottom and plastic utensils. These materials cannot be processed by the county recycling facility; they may damage the equipment there and ultimately will have to go into the trash.

Participation in the recycling program helped the city divert over half of all waste from the landfill to recycling in 2016. To-

by Cathie Meetre

Back in the day, the Big Wheel was the riding machine of choice for kids. They zoomed around the parking lot, drifting their noisemaker-equipped vehicles into dramatic stops and having a great time. Many people then masquerading as adults wondered why there weren't Even Bigger Wheels for them as well.

Fast forward some decades and (if a little late) the wish has come true but in an even better way. The range of adapted bikes displayed courtesy of College Park Bicycles' Larry Black and Proteus Bicycle's Jeff and Laurie Lemieux at Sunday's Greenbelt Farmers Market was a veritable bestiary of velocipedal specimens for everybody – even those for whom bikes have been but a dream – out of reach because of the physical demands of the traditional two-wheeler one-person road bike. The bikes were on display and demonstrated by Black, Lemieux and other local riders, including Mayor Emmett Jordan, who piloted a tandem for those game enough to hop on.

Stealing the show among the younger set was a very sophisticated version of the big wheel – in dashing black and yellow. It would have been a hit with the older folks too but the kids were too fast at getting on board and speeding off. This bike, called Banana Peel and made by Trailmate, was sized for a smaller adult and was highly maneuverable and clearly built for speed. As a solo machine, it wasn't perfect for all adaptive needs but for individuals with balance or back problems but good strength and sight, it was an excellent choice due to its three-wheel stability, low center of gravity and the comfortable recumbent riding position. One imagines its inventor never quite got over those early childhood riding experiences.

A favorite ride was the Morphheus – a blend of recumbent bike on the front with a conventional rear saddle. Both positions are equipped with pedals – if the front rider pedals (and they don't have to) the rear person must also pedal – but the steering is done from the back seat. The front rider, however, can free wheel while the rear person stokes – helpful to those with limited stamina. This sharing of power may be uniquely democratic, if asymmetric.

Unlike a typical tandem, where the rear rider gets an uninterrupted view of the other guy's shoulder blades, the recumbent rider gets a wrap-round view, seated comfortably. This combination opens up cycling to individuals with a wide variety of physical challenges. The front seat seemed a little exposed and intimidating at first sight – as though riding in it would feel unstable or vulnerable – but Greenbelt Stoker Bill Cornett set a steady and stable pace and passengers agreed that the experience was surprisingly serene and magical – much like running effortlessly in a dream.

Denna Lambert was there to talk to riders interested in helping her on her quest of biking across Iowa on a tandem, making her case with an impressive demonstration of team riding with Jordan sharing the honors.

It was a hot day but the energy of the cycle group radiated from their booth and visitors to the market were engaged with them and their machineries of joy.

The Farmers Market was delighted to have the chance to showcase opportunities for a healthy lifestyle for all individuals, including those whose challenges keep them from activities taken for granted by others. Thanks to Proteus and College Park Bicycles for their generous participation. For more information on adaptive cycling, email larry@bike123.com.

Greenbelter's Documentary Airs at Utopia Film Festival

Local filmmaker Erica Ginsberg will be screening her new documentary at Old Greenbelt Theatre on Saturday, October 14 at noon as part of the Utopia Film Festival.

The film, Creative Feds, is a 15-minute short film Ginsberg co-produced with Leon Gerskovic. It tells the story of two federal employees who balance their dedication to public service with dedication to second careers as professional musicians. One of the musicians, Jennifer Cutting of the OCEAN Orchestra, will join Ginsberg and Gerskovic and other filmmakers for a question and answer period following the screening.

Creative Feds grew out of Ginsberg and Gerskovic's own experiences balancing documentary filmmaking with federal careers. Ginsberg worked for nearly 20 years for the U.S. Department of State before stepping down to run Docs In Progress, a nonprofit that helps other documentary filmmakers. Gerskovic works at the National Institute for Standards and Technology.

"We started out the project specifically wanting to focus on the experiences of federal employees because they are rarely portrayed in the media as being creative," says Ginsberg, "Both of us knew of so many federal employees who had creative passions on the side, but who didn't think of their federal careers as day jobs. We wanted to explore that duality and also see how that creative spirit comes back to their government work."

The film recently won Best Documentary at the Skyline Indie Film Fest in Winchester, Va. The Utopia Film Festival screening will mark the film's Maryland premiere.

Ginsberg grew up in Silver Spring, but has made Greenbelt her home since 2002.

"One of the things which most attracted me to Greenbelt was the movie theater," said Ginsberg. "I had heard that there was an old single-screen movie theater which the community had fought hard to save from the fate of so many similar theaters. I figured that was the kind of town I belonged in." She added, "I never imagined my own film would be shown on that screen."

Ginsberg worked with the Utopia Film Festival for several years as its program director. She has continued to attend the festival and has organized documentary works-in-progress screenings for many years, yet she is proud that Creative Feds was selected on its own merits by the festival committee. "I didn't ask for a submission fee waiver or any special consideration," she added. "I've been on the other side of working with Utopia and other festivals, and I know how much work it is, especially for an all-volunteer-run festival and how important it is to let the festival decide which films it thinks its audience should see."

Visionary Artist's Work Is Featured at New Deal

The New Deal Café's October art exhibition, The Chroma Zone, is a vibrant selection of works from the collection of the transdisciplinary visionary artist Heather Joi Tennant. She brings to town her playful, enchanting and otherworldly creations by way of optical vibration.

Doreen Bolger, former director of the Baltimore Museum of Art, says of Tennant's work, "Her vibrant paintings, drawings and mixed media pieces reflect her amazing performances. Installed at the New Deal Café are Tennant's oil and mixed media paintings spanning her early artistic career to more recent works.

Tennant's painting process is a combination of psychic automatism and traditional painting tech-
